ANNUAL SESSION OF DEMOCRATS

County Committeemen Meet at Lincoln Way Hotel, Adopt Platform, Elect Officers, and Hear Speeches by Rudisill and Brodbeck.

The annual meeting of the Democratic Committee of Adams County was held this morning at the Lincoln Way Hotel with a good representation of party workers from the various boroughs and townships.

The business transaction included the re-election of the former officers, chairman, D. H. Guise, Liberty township; secretary, D. P. Delap, Bendersville; treasurer, Paul A. Martin, Gettysburg. Rules were adopted to conform to those of the State Committee and to come up for final adoption three months hence.

The platform adopted included the unqualified endorsement of the Wilson administration; an endorsement of the conduct of the office of congressman as carried out by the present incumbent, Andrew R. Brodbeck; the endorsement of the state ticket, and of the candidacy of D. Calvin Rudisill as candidate for the State Legislature.

Mr. Rudisill was present at the meeting and, when called upon, responded briefly thanking the Democrats of the county, through their representatives, for his recent nomination, and promising, if elected, to vote for the referring of large disputed questions to the people for their decision, and honest judgment as the thing which would determine his own vote where matters were to be decided directly by the legislature.

Congressman Brodbeck responded for a half hour when he was called upon. He talked at length of the work accomplished since the inauguration of President Wilson and the election of the Democratic Senate and House. He laid particular stress on the passage of the tariff bill, the currency bill, the Panama Canal tolls repeal and the pending trust legislation. He urged the support of local Democrats to the state ticket, to the candidacy of D. Calvin Rudisill and to Mr. Brodbeck himself.

His speech closed with an earnest plea for unity in the party and the meeting was adjourned after the adoption of the resolutions committee report.

OCKER HOUSE SOLD

Lower End Hotel Changes, York Man the Purchaser.

Robert Godfrey, of York, on Friday purchased the building, good will, furniture, and fixtures of the Ocker House, Littlestown, from Mrs. Martha J. Ocker. He will get possession as soon as the necessary license transfer formalities have been transacted. It is understood the purchase price was $15,000. The hotel was conducted for many years by James Ocker and after his death passed out of the immediate control of the Ocker family. Four or five years ago Mrs. Ocker took charge of the place, remodeled it and conducted it in such a manner that it became known in York and Adams counties as one of the best small town hotels in this section. Mrs. Ocker will move to her residence in Littlestown, and Howard Spalding, who has been manager of the place for her, will devote his time to the horse and cattle business.

FINE BUILDING AT ARENDTSTVILLE

School Board Decides to Purchase Site for Two Story, Six Room Public School Building. People Have Voted the Money.

At a meeting of the Arendtsville school board on Friday evening it was decided that the town's new school building should be erected on a lot of ground now owned by Luther Rice. The purchase of a tract of one acre situated on South High street was authorized at an expense of $325 and the new building will be located not far from the one now in use.

The plans provide for a thoroughly modern structure. It will be two story frame with a brick veneer, making an attractive exterior. There will be four large class rooms, the school board looking to the future and the growth of the town. There are at present only three schools in Arendtsville but the building soon to be erected will provide for an increase in population and the consequent development of the town's school system.

On the first floor there will be two good size class rooms and a library. The second floor will have two rooms and a teachers' or stock room. The whole building will be 34 x 70 and heated with the Smith system which provides for a heater in each room, the company which installs the plant furnishing the specifications for the new building.

The structure is to cost not more than $6000, the amount authorized by the people of Arendtsville at a recent election and will provide that town with the best public school building in the upper end of the county. It is to be finished by December first. The directors having in charge the erection of the building are A. I. Weidner, C. H. Klepper, J. A. Knouse, C. S. Rice and L. H. Rice. They are now advertising for bids.

Two of the three schools of the town have been conducted in the old building while the third was provided accommodations over the Fire Company room.

D. H. Lehman, of Millersville, was recently appointed supervising principal of the High School; E. Cecil Stover, teacher of the Grammar School; and Hiram C. Lady teacher of the Primary School. Roy D. Knouse, who was formerly head of the Arendtsville High School, recently accepted the principalship of the Littlestown High School.

HAVE RAISED $18,000

Make Start toward New Fund for the College.

About $18,000 has been pledged thus far to the new fund of $130,000 being raised for Gettysburg College. The money is to be used for the erection of a new science hall, a new Prep, an infirmary and the equipment of a machine shop. It is the intention of the college authorities to try to get one fourth of the amount, or $32,500, from the Rockefeller Foundation which contributed $50,000 to the endowment fund completed last year. This week Dr. Granville and Prof. Huber are touring the rural districts of the county and have secured a number of small subscriptions. It is the intention to visit these districts in the summer months and confine the work of the cities to the months of more inclement weather.

CATHOLICS WON

The score was tie at four runs in the second inning and again at five runs in the third and the rooters had plenty of fun out of the thirteen hits and nine errors. The collection amounted to $3.16.

TWO ARE INJURED BY AUTOMOBILES

Clothes Line Catches Guest of Mr. and Mrs. Slaybaugh Injuring Both Eyes Severely. Auto Crank Breaks Boy's Arm.

While washing his Ford automobile at the home of Elmer E. Slaybaugh on Springs avenue this morning Reuben Douglass, of Philadelphia, was severely cut about both eyes and the nose.

The accident occurred in a most unusual way. Mr. Douglass had about completed cleaning the car on the rear lawn and after cranking it started to turn around. He failed to notice a wire clothes line hanging in his way and in a moment it had caught his glasses. They were splintered, the sharp pieces cutting both eyes.

His wounds bled rather freely and he was taken to the office of a local physician where the injuries were dressed. It is not believed that any serious consequences will follow the accident. Only slight harm was done to the automobile.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglass arrived at the Slaybaugh home Friday evening for a visit of several days.

With his arm broken four times at the same place in a period of less than two years, Lewis Spangler, the sixteen year old son of C. C. Spangler, of East Berlin, now faces the ordeal of having the bones wired together. His latest misfortune occurred on Friday when he was cranking his father's automobile.

Every time the arm has been broken between the elbow and the wrist and always while cranking the same automobile.

She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James McGuigan, and the following brothers and sisters, Mrs. Lula Heitcamp, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Dora Louder, of York; Luther and Samuel McGuigan, of York; and Arthur McGuigan, of Coatesville.

BIG PEACH CROP

Washington County will Market More Than 200,000 Bushels.

Conservative estimates of the peach crop in the South Mountains belt range from 600 to 800 carloads, or between 200,000 and 250,000 bushels, while the financial returns will be about $1 a bushel. The crop, notwithstanding the damage done in some sections by late frosts, will be much above normal, and will be shipped almost entirely from Smithsburg, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Washington, Philadelphia, New York and New England points will buy the bulk of the crop.

WIFE FAINTED AT THE FUNERAL

Taneytown Woman Sends Flowers for Man She Murdered, Goes to Funeral but Faints as Body is to be Taken to Cemetery.

Falling in a faint by the side of the coffin which held her husband, murdered by her own hand, Mrs. Edgar S. McCauley, of Taneytown, created a sensation at the funeral which took place in Hagerstown on Friday.

Services were held at the home of his brother, William McCauley, by Rev. Howard King, pastor of the Beaver Creek Christian Church. Among the numerous floral contributions resting on the coffin was a floral cross made of roses and lilies, and two other designs sent by his wife.

The funeral was largely attended, among those present being his wife, a sister and his two young children by his divorced wife. Mrs. McCauley, after viewing the corpse for the last time, fell to the floor in a faint, and could not go to the Dunkard Cemetery, where burial was made. The pallbearers were all cousins of the dead man.

It was stated by Attorney Emory Stinchcomb, of Baltimore on Friday, who is defending Mrs. McCauley in the case against her of shooting her husband, that Mr. McCauley left no will, and that in all probabilities the entire estate will go to the widow.

There is much speculation in the minds of those familiar with the shooting of Mr. McCauley as to what action the Grand Jury is going to take in the case. George Hartman, the State's Attorney for Baltimore county, seemed to take exception to the action of the coroner's inquest in exonerating Mrs. McCauley on the charge of shooting her husband. Mr. Hartman seems to think the jury overstepped its rights in returning such a verdict in favor of the defendant.

MEDIATORS REST; WAIT ON REBELS

They Hope Mexican Peace Plan
Will be Accepted.

HAVE NO WORD FROM THEM

The Most Difficult Task of the Two Factions Will Be to Agree Upon a Provisional President.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 27.—As it will probably be several days before the mediators are called upon to take any further action, Ambassador Da Gama, of Brazil, left here to join Mrs.
Da Gama at Long Branch, N. J., for a few days.

Minister Suarez, of Chile, probably will depart in a day or two. Minister Naon, of Argentina, will remain in Niagara Falls to greet the Constitutionalist representatives and introduce them to the Huerta delegates.

No word was received from the Constitutionalist delegation. It is not known when the members will reach Niagara Falls. It is presumed that on the arrival of Fernando Calderon in Washington he will confer with Luis Cabrera, Rafael Zubaran and Jose Vasconcelos before they enter into negotiations with the Huerta delegates, who are now in Niagara Falls.
Mr. Calderon has just come from General Carranza's headquarters and is supposed to possess intimate details of the purposes of the rebel leaders.

All of the members of the mediation colony are not agreed that disposition of the international questions to the satisfaction of the American and the Huerta delegates assures the adjustment of the Mexican problem as a whole, although the prevailing feeling is optimistic. The most difficult task confronting the two factions is to agree upon a man for the provisional presidency. Under the guidance of the mediators long lists of names have been considered and none was found acceptable to both sides.

Stirred by Anti-Religious Crusade.

Mexico City, June 27.—Most Rev.
Francisco Plancarte y Navarrete, the archbishop of Linares, and Most Rev.
Francisco Orozco y Jimenez, archbishop of Guadalajara, accompanied by the French chargé d'affaires, called at the Brazilian legation here and held a long conference with Minister Car-doso de Oliveira regarding what they termed the hostile attitude of the Constitutionalist church toward the Roman Catholic church. Many instances were cited by the prelates in confirmation of the charges.

The archdiocese of Linares, which includes the city of Monterey, is reported to be suffering greatly as a result of the expulsion of priests and the closing of the Roman Catholic churches. The Brazilian minister will send the statements of the archbishops to the state department at Washington, which is expected to exercise its influence in preventing a continuation of the Constitutionalist's alleged anti-religious crusade.

WILSON ENDORSES STONE

The President Gives Him a Boost in Fight For His Seat.

Washington, June 27.—The candidacies of Senator William Stone, former Governor Joseph W. Folk and others for the Missouri senatorship, have been the subject of considerable discussion at the capital recently.

In administration circles it was declared the following letter to Hugh Stephens, of Jefferson City, Mo., very clearly indicates the position of the president. It reads:

"I want to say that no member of the senate has been a more consistent or generous supporter of this administration than Senator William A.
Stone. He has assisted not only by his vote, but by active co-operation of many kinds, and by earnest and disinterested counsel concerning matters of public interest which have been pending from time to time. His action in all public matters since my inauguration has bound me to him by ties of admiration and friendship."

MAN HELD UP AND SHOT

Beaten and Fired on When Thieves Found He Had No Money.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 27.—A premonition that he was to be held up by highwaymen prompted George Majale to leave his money at his son's home in Inokman when he left for Pittston.

While traveling a lonely road three masked men came upon him, and when they searched his pockets and found only twelve cents they beat him and then opened fire on him. One bullet went through the palm of his right hand and the other imbedded itself in his left thigh.

After being left on the roadway Majale crawled a mile to his home. Majale declared the highwaymen thought he had his money concealed in his clothing and when they failed to find it they shot him.

DUCHESS MARLBOROUGH.

Says She is a Suffragist, But Not a Militant.

AMERICAN DUCHESS ARRIVES

Former Consuela Vanderbilt to Visit Her Mother.

New York, June 27.—Consuela, the Duchess of Marlborough, arrived here from England on the liner Aquitania to pay a five weeks' visit to her mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at Newport.
The American noblewoman admitted being a suffragist, but decried the violence of the militants in England.

"However," she said, by way of explanation, "conditions are much different in England from those in this country. British men are not as open-minded as American men. I believe that women will cease their violence
if they get the ballot."

The duchess was met at the pier by her two brothers, Harold Vanderbilt and William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

FORD TO DOUBLE MOTOR FACTORY

He Plans to Employ About 45,000 Men.

Detroit, June 27.—Announcement was made that the Ford Motor company's mammoth factory is to be doubled in size at an approximate cost of $5,000,000. Several new buildings, cov-ing 400 feet and six stories high, costing $500,000 each, and a power plant 35 feet high, 150 feet wide and 240 feet long, which will hold the largest gasoline engine in the world, costing approximately $1,500,000, are planned.
Work has already been started and will be pushed to completion.

When the new additions have been completed the Ford plant will cover about eighty-five acres, making it the largest in the world.

The new gasoline power engine will have a driving capacity of 30,000 horse power.

The present plant is capable of employing close to 20,000 men, and with it nearly doubled in size about 45,000 men could be employed at a wage of not less than $5 per day for married
men.

WASHINGTON FORFEITS GAME

Refuse to Play When Umpire Declares Pitcher Engel's Delivery Illegal.

Philadelphia, June 27.—Washington forfeited the first game of the double header to the Athletics at Shibe park 9 to 0 when Clark Griffith took the Nationals off the field because he objected to a ruling of Umpire Chilly.

After giving the Washington three minutes to resume play Chilly awarded the game to the Mackmen. The score at the time the forfeit was declared favored the Athletics 2 to 0 and three men were on base in the fourth inning.

The forfeit was caused by the alleged illegal delivery of Pitcher Joe Engel, of Washington.

KIDNAPERS SENTENCED

Woman Gets 10 to 30 Years and Husband 20 to 0 Years.

New York, June 27.—About to be come a mother, Mrs. Niva Bulsca, wife of Pietro Bulsca, stood up before Judge Nott in general sessions court and was sentenced to ten to thirty years in Auburn prison.

The woman was led away and then her husband was sentenced to twenty to forty years in Sing Sing prison.

The couple were convicted of kidnaping the five-year-old son of Domingo Gamino, a grocer. The day after the child disappeared the father received a letter demanding $5000 for his return.

House Votes Down Motor Cars.

Washington, June 27.—By a vote of 139 to 128 the house refused to accept a senate amendment to the legislative appropriation bill authorizing the purchase of motor cars for Vice President Marshall and Speaker Clark. The vote was so close that the minority leader, Mr. Mann, obtained a recapitulation of the vote. The bill will be returned to conference with this amendment still in disagreement.

DR. CRILE BANISHES TERRORS OF SURGERY

Cleveland Physician's Work
Put Next to Lister's.

Atlantic City, June 27.—Dr. George W. Crile, of Cleveland, whose scientific and philosophical researches relative to shock have gained world wide recognition, was named here as the man who has made the most important contributions to surgery since the work of Lister, the father of antiseptic surgery.

His paper, read before the section on surgery of the American Medical association, dealt with the application of principles formulated by him as the result of his studies in the administration of anesthetics for operations involving the gall bladder and stomach.
He described the experiments by which he had proved that surgical shock not only affects the brain, but injuries the liver and the suprarenal capsules, which are the organs covering the tops of the kidneys.

Sleep, he declared, was always required to restore the cells of the brain, suprarenal capsules and liver to a normal condition.

The only method of preventing shock from reaching these organs through the nervous system is to anesthetize the operative area by the local administration of an anesthetic such as cocaine. When the nerves have been deadened so that destructive impulses cannot be carried to the organs susceptible to adverse influences such as shock, the patient receives a general anesthetic and the operation proceeds.

The effect of the combined anes-thetia is to give the widest margin of safety, and the gentleness of the whole procedure robs surgery of the worst of its terrors. It is ascertained that countless lives can be saved by the care attending operations carried out under this procedure.

rupted.

minutes and fifty-three seconds elapsed time. The corrected time was estimated at about a minute and a half.

WITH ROOSEVELT ON A TAPIR HUNT IN THE WILDS OF BRAZIL

Colonel Relates More of His Adventures With Jungle Denizens.

Big Peccaries Go In Herds and Are Fierce Foes. Often Charge.

THE most important part of our trip turns out to be that down the Unknown river. In view of the discussion that has taken place about this river it is perhaps best to make this short statement in reference thereto. The full account—and the only account—of our trip down the river will be given in the October and November numbers of Scribner's Magazine.

We put upon the map an unknown river, in length and volume roughly corresponding to the Elbe, the Rhine and the Rhone and Saone. The upper course of this river, where we went down it, had never hitherto been traversed nor the adjoining country visited by any civilized man. The lower course had for years been known to the rubber men, but the cartographers not only of Europe and the United States but of Brazil were so totally ignorant of it that not a hint of its existence is to be found on the map. For example, the map of South America furnished us by the American Museum of Natural History, an excellent publication by a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, and as good as any other map, contains not only no hint of the course of the river, but not even a name for the dotted outline which I suppose probably was meant to indicate the mouth of the river where it entered the Madeira. On a Brazilian map I saw this dotted outline given the name by which it is known by the rubber men, Aripuanã, but it was still left in a creek, the mapmaker having no idea whatever of its size or importance.

Colonel Kills a Tapir. Telling of an exciting tapir hunt, Colonel Roosevelt says: The tapir was coming downstream at a great rate, only its queer head above water, while the dogs were closing rapidly on it. The paddlers uttered loud cries. As the tapir turned slightly to one side or the other the long, slightly upturned snout and the strongly pronounced arch of the crest along the head and upper neck gave it a marked and unusual aspect.

I could not shoot, for it was directly in line with one of the pursuing dogs. Suddenly it dived, the snout being slightly curved downward as it did so. There was no trace of it; we gazed eagerly in all directions; the dog dug in front came alongside our canoe, and the paddlers rested, their paddles ready.

Then we made out the tapir clambering up the bank. It had dived at right angles to the course it was following and swam under water to the very edge of the shore, rising under the overhanging tree branches at a point where a drinking trail for game led down a break in the bank. The branches partially hid it, and it was in deep shadow, so that it did not offer a very good shot.

My bullet went too far back, and the tapir disappeared in the forest at a gallop as if unhurt, although the bullet really secured it by making it unwilling to trust to its speed and leave the neighborhood of the water.

An Exciting Chase. Three or four of the hounds were by this time swimming the river, leaving the tapir in the lurch.

A WILSON STEAM ROLLER.

President's Daughter Says "It's Awful," but She Has Her Way.

How Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson used the steam roller to put through a resolution for which she was working is told with glow by those who knew of the incident in the conference on social centers at Madison, Wis. Miss Wilson offered the resolution, put the question when the chairman of the conference hesitated and declared the resolution carried before the presiding officer caught his breath.

"I know it is awful," she whispered as she took her seat, "but it had been discussed, and we knew no one opposed it, anyhow, so what's the harm?"

The resolution recommended an amendment to the Wisconsin social center law providing for the naming of secretaries for social center work. State School Superintendent Cary, presiding, did not act promptly enough to suit the president's daughter.

"Is everybody in favor of the resolution?" she asked. There was a chorus of yeas, and she declared the motion carried.

Kentucky's New Senator.

Johnson N. Camden, Democrat, named by Governor McCreary of Kentucky as senator to succeed the late William O. Bradley, Republican, is a son of ex-Senator Camden of West Virginia. He inherited great wealth from his father, which was acquired from investments in oil and coal lands in West Virginia. Mr. Camden will serve until the fall election, which will choose a senator for the remainder of the term of the late Senator Bradley, which would have expired next March.

Ants Bake Bread.

Ants have been found in Dalmatia that actually make bread by chewing seeds into pulp, forming it in loaves, baking them in the sun and then storing them away for future use.

Points of View

You may sit way down in the grand stand Behind a fifty-cent fat, black cigar Or way up on the sun-kissed bleachers, Where the famous voiced masses are; Perhaps you are out in center field Pushing, eager, against the ropes And watching with quickened breath the bunch.

That carries your world series hopes, But you don't feel the same old elation That you felt once when home Kelly slid With the winning run and you saw it all Through a hole in the fence when a kid.

Perhaps you're on the roof with the "press gang," An outsider whose nerve's with him still; You may have access to the dugout With the right to call Carrigan "Bill"; The sergeant may even salute you, And the "cops" for your "front" may fall.

Yes, oh, apex of fame, at the "opener" Perhaps you threw out the first ball, But you don't get the same old enjoyment That once on a time you did, When you watched the game through a knothole In the fence when you were a kid.

OFFICER OF THE NAVY A CARRIER OF GERMS.

Is In Perfect Health, but Infects Entire Station With Typhoid.

Navy department officials are puzzled over the proper disposition of an officer said to be a typhoid germ "carrier." He is apparently in the best of health, but seems laden with typhoid germs and when he has been assigned to a ship or shore station a typhoid epidemic has invariably followed.

Because of the officer's strange case navy officials refuse to make public his name. He is now under treatment in New York by specialists. Although he is an excellent officer and otherwise fit for duty, if the typhoid germs cannot be eradicated from his system navy authorities hold that he must be retired for "physical disability" as a safeguard.

The "carrier," one of the important discoveries of bacteriologists, has attracted the attention of the medical profession for several years. By some strange freak of nature certain individuals carry about the germs of deadly diseases without themselves being affected.

New York has had several cases of this kind. One was a dairyman in a county from which much milk comes to the city, and another was the famous "Typhoid Mary," who, apparently in perfect health, was responsible for an outbreak of the disease wherever she went. She was kept in a hospital until the germs disappeared.

"Carriers" have been found among the enlisted men of the army and navy. No particular class appears exempt, for they are found amid luxurious surroundings as well as in poorer quarters.

CONSTRUCTS A FAIRY GARDEN

Remarkable Back Yard Transformation by a Chicago Man.

The city back yard can be made a place of beauty and attractiveness, according to A. F. Meissner of Chicago. He transformed a 50 by 125 foot lot into a veritable fairy garden, where varieties of flowers bloom around a pool in which real fishes swim in water flowing from a miniature waterfall on the face of a rugged cliff.

The garden is the result of five years' work, which began with the creating of a pond in the back yard. Leaving a crescent shaped island, on which stands a summer house in the center, Mr. Meissner excavated around it to a depth of about two feet, lining the hole thus made with a water retaining coating of stones and cement. The earth removed was used in building on the lawn a half dozen hillocks, to be artistically covered with flowers. Young willows planted around the water add a natural touch, and rustic bridges lead to the summer house.

When he had finished the pond Mr. Meissner decided that he would have to revise some of the existing scenery.

"Down with the back fence," said he, and he started in to haul more rocks and cement. The new idea resulted in a cliff twelve feet in height, from the brow of which rushes a waterfall. The fall is ingeniously constructed of a length of skylight glass, which gives an appearance of depth and swiftness to the shallow film of water sliding down its surface from a concealed pipe on top of the cliff.

VACATION PRECAUTIONS.

Every nine out of ten people are planning to take a vacation trip some time, somewhere, this summer, but where to go is the question. Be this understood, says a North Carolina state board of health bulletin: The most picturesque and otherwise attractive resorts are not always the safest. Your first consideration should be, "Where can I find rest and recreation without jeopardizing my health?" On making your choice look well to these facts: First, that the supply of drinking water comes not from shallow wells or from other sources likely to be polluted; second, that flies and mosquitoes are well screened against; third, that there are sanitary arrangements for the disposal of sewage. Know these things, and your chances for having typhoid, malaria and many other diseases will be greatly diminished.

THE KITCHEN CUPBOARD

PUTTING UP STRAWBERRIES.

WILD strawberries, when they can be obtained, make the best preserves. Various ways of putting up this delicious fruit are suggested here.

Strawberry Jam.—To each quart of berries take one cupful of sugar. Wash and hull the berries, add the sugar, cover and place in a warm oven thirty minutes or on the back of the range. Remove the cover and crush the strawberries and then boil or simmer slowly fifteen minutes. This makes a nice consistency. If you like it stiffer boil longer.

A Popular Preserve.

Strawberry Preserves.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of sugar to each quart of berries. Wash and hull the berries, cover with the sugar and let them stand two hours. Put in preserving kettle and boil slowly thirty minutes. Skim frequently, being careful not to break the berries. Put into jars or tumblers.

Canned Strawberries.—First cap the strawberries, wash and put in a pan or bowl a layer of strawberries, or about two quarts of berries. Sprinkle a tea cupful of sugar over and put layer of berries and sugar until all are used. Let the berries stand overnight and next morning juice will be on the berries. Add no water. Put on and cook as any fruit and you will have no trouble in keeping your strawberries.

Using the Juice.

Strawberry Jelly.—Wash and hull the strawberries. Crush and put on top of double boiler. Boil slowly until soft. Rub through strainer, then strain through cheesecloth or jelly bag. To each cupful of juice add one cupful of granulated sugar, which has been heated in the oven, slowly stirring until the sugar is melted. Only let it come to the boiling point. Put into jelly glasses which have been dipped in boiling water. When cold cover with waxed paper and put on the tin cover.

Strawberry Fruit Syrup.—Cook the strawberries in a granite or porcelain lined kettle until the juice flows freely. Mash, strain the juice through cheesecloth or cotton batting; then measure. Allow a pound of sugar to each pint of juice. Boil together five minutes, then bottle. When ready for use add a few spoonfuls to a glass of cold water or to more liberal quantity to the contents of the punch bowl.

New Number on Clock.

Donald, not quite six, is just learning to tell the time. The other day he was playing in the room where the clock is and his mother in an adjoining room asked him what time it was. He glanced at the clock and answered, "Well, mamma, it is just five minutes past the keyhole."

TOOK POSSESSION OF HOUSE

Crowning Eccentricity of Englishwoman's Life, That Was Filled With Eccentricities.

In an old book published in Paris under the title of "Le Journal d'un Voyage au Levant," there is an amusing account of the way in which Lady Hester Lucy Stanhope, the eccentric English traveler, took possession of the house at Djoun, where eventually she made her permanent home.

She was pleased with the house and its surrounding gardens, and accepted an invitation to dinner. As she sat after dinner, with the owner, a Christian merchant, he said to her that if she liked the place, he should be glad if she would stay the night. When she said that she liked it so much that she would stay there the rest of her days, he took it as a polite figure of speech; but a fortnight later, as she still prolonged her visit, he suggested that Europe might be expecting her return.

"I do not intend to return," she replied, carelessly.

"Ah, then you intend to build a palace in the neighborhood?" said he. "No, this house suits me very well."

"But I cannot let it or sell it, madam."

"I do not wish to hire it or buy it, but I intend to keep it," was the startling reply.

In this dilemma the merchant dispatched a messenger posthaste to Emir Beshyr, who sent word to Lady Hester that she must give up the house. Lady Hester, however, wrote to Constantinople, whence a courier came to the emir, bearing the order, "Obey the princess of Europe in everything."

So the disgraced merchant fled, leaving her ladyship in possession. There for 20 years she lived the life of a recluse, growing more and more withdrawn from the world, and more accustomed to dwell in a mental and spiritual realm of her own creation, until she died, and was buried in the garden of the house that she had chosen.

REAL CAUSE FOR ANXIETY

Old Gentleman's Exceedingly Neat Rejoinder to Tactless Remark Made by Nephew.

There is an old gentleman in Philadelphia approaching the ninety mark who still finds much zest in life, and, having retained all his faculties, he feels that a few of the physical disabilities of age are of small account.

His nephew is a man of small tact, a fact which has always aroused the ire of the old man.

A few weeks before the old gentleman's eighty-ninth birthday this nephew, who had been overweighed with business cares for years, started on a trip to Europe that was to consume a year.

"I have come to say good-bye," announced the nephew to the old man. "I am starting abroad to be gone a year—perhaps longer. I thought I might never—well, you understand—I wanted to be sure to see you once more."

Training Outweighs Long Service

There is no better proof of this than the every-day scenes of long service, untrained employees at the beck and call of younger men who occupy the big positions because of their training. It's a case of Training vs. Long Service—with the odds in favor of the trained man. Get out of the untrained rut. Mark and mail the attached coupon and let the I. C. S., of Scranton, tell how you can qualify for a better position. How you can protect yourself against servitude in your old age. How you can become an expert at your chosen line of work.

That the business of the I. C. S. is to Raise Salaries is shown by the monthly average of 400 letters voluntarily written by students reporting salaries raised and advancement won through I. C. Wallingford In His Prime

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

SYNOPSIS

J. Rufus Wallingford, skillful manipulator of other people's money for his own benefit, meets Benson Falls, idle son of a railroad president, and three equally idle friends.

Wallingford agrees to manage a company to market Benson Falls' patented portable bungalow after Falls drops the suit at that his father is soon to open a new road through land once obtained from Wallingford at the latter's great financial loss.

Wallingford instructs his pal, Blackie Daw, to act as an accomplice in a scheme to bleed the four young men through false orders for the portable house.

Daw, representing himself as three buyers, orders several hundred houses. Wallingford gets $125,000 cash from the rich quartet for his own patents on the company's output and threatens injunction suits against the company for infringement of other patents.

CHAPTER V.

The End of the Company.

WALLINGFORD called a board of directors' meeting.

On the following day a similar telegram came from the gentleman in Ontario.

Mr. Wallingford called a board of directors' meeting.

On the second day after that a similar telegram came from the gentleman in Arkansas.

Mr. Wallingford called a board of directors' meeting.

On the second day after that, again, Mr. Beazzum himself came into the factory clad in the most violent silk sweater procurable.

Mr. Wallingford not only called a board of directors' meeting on this special occasion, but he spent an entire day in a taxi and brought them to it, limp and pitiful as they were.

Mr. Beazzum, more violently incensed than his unspeakable sweater, was a tornado of righteous wrath, whom Mr. Wallingford endeavored, with no success at all, to placate with soothing words and fond promises.

"No!" shrieked Mr. Beazzum. "O'p! have the law on yez, begob! You promised me delivery on a certain date. I have me 300 mln engaged and no houses to put them in. I could have had the houses elsewhere. But, by cheminy, I place my confidence on dis skinner concern an' they turn me down! I'm agin you—see? Tomorrow, by heck, I'll stack you up in front of a $200,000 damage suit, so help me! And that goes!"

Wallingford, in a panic at Blackie's audacity, but appreciating far less than Blackie how much the panic of his numbed board of directors could safely be trodden upon and jerked to bits and girdly jangled with, just did save himself from an attack of heart failure and drew himself together for his cue.

"But, my dear man," he expostulated; "my dear Mr. Beazzum, you must realize that, as far as intent goes, we are entirely innocent in this affair. We delivered the goods to you on time, and we cannot be held for anything on that score. In a spirit of fairness, however, we will do this much: We will pay the freight both ways, take back the 300 portable houses and repay you 10 per cent advance deposit in cash. Isn't that fair, Mr. Beazzum?"

"Hear, hear!" cried Rickey Saunders in a tone which tried to be exultant in "That's a sportin' offer, Mr. Beazzum!"

able in any court, for a sum so large that it staggered even Wallingford when Mr. Beazzum had the careless impudence to mention it. Mr. Beazzum intended to press his claim in the highest courts in the land, so help him Moses, and there was no possible compromise. Hold on though! There might—that is, it was just barely possible that there might—be a way out.

Hope, dim, vague, distant, glimmering hope, the barest flicker and spark of hope blushed faintly upon the far distant horizon for five disconsolate gentlemen in trade. It might be barely possible that, if the Speckled Bass company, retaining its 10 per cent advance payment, were to relinquish the goods in settlement of Mr. Beazzum's damage claim—Well, gentlemen, there you were, and what were you going to do about it or were you going to stand suit, blugosh!

"At last there's somethin' fairly sportin'," Rickey plucked up his spirits enough to announce. "Is it correct gov'nor, that this gentleman will just take the 300 portable houses and go back home to Bezap, or Bezbiber, or wherever it is, and never—er—never molest us again?"

"That's his only term," vociferated Mr. Beazzum.

"Then it's perfectly easy," declared Rickey, so relieved that he could pluck with interest at the mustache which would not come. "We don't want the bloomin' bungalows, do we, fellows?"

The unanimous assent to this was a closely concerted groan, but the groan was emphatic.

"Then," went on Rickey, still brightening, "I vote, fellows, that we accept the bloomin' compromise and thank the gentleman from Bezap for having made this rippin', good, sportin' offer."

"Just a moment, gentlemen," warned Wallingford solemnly. "We are setting a dangerous precedent. We have customers in Ontario and in Arkansas who will be claiming the same terms."

"Move we let 'em all have the terms," returned Rickey promptly. "Move we let 'em all have 'em. That's sportin', eh, fellows? Somebody second the motion."

By some remarkable coincidence the attorney for the National company just happened to happen in upon them at this juncture. The attorney for the National company was very severe. He had just received fresh information regarding an infringement incorporated into the Speckled Bass product, but not mentioned in the Speckled Bass patent, and this infringement gave the National company an additional crushing legal weapon. The company he represented was not disposed to be harsh, however. It would give the Speckled Bass company its choice of two courses. It could continue business under a prohibitive royalty or it could quit business entirely and forever.

It took the board of directors just forty-three seconds to accept the proposition to go out of business entirely and forever, and immediately thereupon it departed in a body, declining even to take a parting drink in the hideous marts of trade.

"Well, Jimmy," said Blackie, after even the attorney for the opposition had departed, "let's crack a bumper and count the profits. You made $125,000 clear on the patents, which coin belongs to you individually, and we have 525 portable houses, free of all encumbrance, except freightage to points of good sale, and worth $212,000, which cost us $21,200. It was a fine and dandy revenge, Jimmy."

"Revenge!" half shouted Wallingford, leaning over suddenly and pounding upon the table with his big fist. "Would you call this piddling little amusement revenge? You're never serious enough, Blackie, to understand what that word means, but I do. Did you see me call young Bessy back? Well, I sent a message by him that will bring me a revenge worth while at 11 o'clock tomorrow. What are you laughing about, kid?"

"Never mind," said Toad, with a wave of his freckled hand. "I'm on. You two is too sick to rest well nights, but the booger man'll git you sure."

At precisely 11 Toad Jessop ushered into the office of the official manager a spare, nervous, leather faced man, whose beard sprang black an hour after a shave. He hung slouchily in his good clothes, and his step had no elasticity, but there was an unquenchable fire in his eyes, and a vast unnumbered army of men, from ditch diggers to millionaires, would tremble if E. H. Falls were to do so inconceivable a thing as to roar. He shuffled into Wallingford's office and sat quietly in a big chair, shrinking into his clothes, almost as if he were in dread of his antagonist—and he waited!

Wallingford proved the weaker man in the start, for he began the struggle. "Well, I suppose your son has told you of the iniquitous manner in which he was robbed?" began Wallingford gloatingly.

"He did nothing of the sort," said Falls. "If he had been robbed he would have crawled under the porch and licked his own wound until it was well. I never yet heard Bessy whine. Was he robbed?"

"Well, I wouldn't just say robbed," returned Wallingford, with the ugly laugh of a man who sees his moment of revenge on the way and thirsts for it. "I wouldn't say robbed because that might be taken as a confession. He just proved himself a saphead, that's all."

The shrunken figure in the chair straightened up with surprising elasticity. "You'll kindly drop any mention of Bessy," he said, with a snap of his jaws. "I can put Bessy in a turning lathe, trim off a thousandth of an inch of careless artificiality, split him up and make of him six better men than most of his recent associates. I know what's in the boy, and I am highly pleased to allow him to be utterly care free and an outward fool if he likes, but if I ever need him I'll skin him and have a real man standing by the side of me. Now, what did you want to see me about?"

"The Lake Michigan and Pacific," blurted Wallingford surlily, for so far his attack had been a boomerang.

The eyes of Falls lighted with immediate interest. "So you are the one who has the balance of stock hidden away?" he commented.

"You bet I am!" declared Wallingford, leaning forward in sudden anger and holding his fist tensely upon the edge of the table. From that moment Falls lounged back in his chair and listened and never moved. "You bet I am!" repeated Wallingford. "Bessy, your unskinned man, let out to me when I first met him that you are actually going to build the connecting line between the Chicago and Manhattan and the Lake Michigan and Pacific railroads, and create the new Pacific trunk line upon which you made me lose the only real fortune I ever had."

Wallingford's face had reddened, and his voice grew husky with emotion as he went on. "Yes, you did! I came to you with a proposition to sell that connecting strip of land for stock in the two roads, which were bound to advance in value when they were consolidated, and you led me into a wild mess of margin speculation, which cost me $500,000, all I had in the world. Now, I'm going to get it all back, with interest. Do you hear me? With interest! The minute I found that you were actually going to slip this road through, which you had denied that you would ever build, I mortgaged everything I possessed, borrowed everything I could raked and scraped together until I had a little over $300,000. With this I quietly bought outright all the loose stock I could find of the Lake Michigan and Pacific, knowing that you were doing the same, that you would not go into the open market for fear of boosting the price and that you felt your operations to be so secret that you had plenty of time to secure control."

Wallingford mopped his brow. He was hoarse now. Falls sat quietly regarding him, but did nothing so dramatic as even to light a cigar.

"Well, after I had invested all that I could I showed W. D. Fishbacker your order for 100 portable houses and called his attention to the points to which they were to be delivered and Fishbacker struggled with you for the rest. I notice that you ran up the price quite a bit before all the stock was shaken loose. There isn't a share of it to be had, Mr. Falls, except from Fishbacker or myself, and you know how much chance there is for you ever to do business on any basis with Fishbacker." His voice was very hoarse now, but even above the hoarseness it arose to a queer caricature of an angry shriek, and his face was purple with passion. "I hold control, which you must have, and you must come to me for it, and you must pay my price!"

There was a moment of silence, in which Wallingford tremblingly reached for a glass of water, and, finding the glass empty, set it down; then, still needing a drink, picked it up and held it foolishly. Falls crossed over the other leg.

"It seems that you have me," he pleasantly admitted. "How much do you want for your $300,000 worth of stock?"

"A million and a quarter," snarled Wallingford, leaning forward and looking closely into the eyes of the only man he had ever held as an enemy.

Falls produced a check book from his pocket, produced a fountain pen from another, wrote a check and arose. "There's your million and a quarter, Mr. Wallingford," he observed in so quiet and even a tone that there must either be hatred, contempt, or, worse than all, complete indifference behind it. "Deliver your stock to my office before the banks close, and you will find that check perfectly negotiable. When you get your million and a quarter go out and buy a cigarette with it and smoke it up and be broke again and start back working the county fairs. I know you'll do it. Wallingford, for a piker always finds his level."

Somehow Falls emerged from Wallingford's office unharmed. The truth seldom meets with an adequate reply except in its own kind.

Well, Wallingford had the million and a quarter for which he had played, enough to give Fannie back her house upon the avenue; enough to furnish himself with all the luxuries and indulgences that he craved; enough to give back to Violet Bonnie her $15,000, with 200 or 300 per cent interest, but still he was not quite satisfied. Why? Because of one simple word. Falls had called him a piker and had proved it.

FAMOUS SCULPTOR'S CONCEPTION OF "WATER," FOR COURT OF THE UNIVERSE.

Scene in one of the sculptural warehouses on the exposition grounds. The figure above is that of a remarkable sculptural composition by Robert I. Aitkin, one of the most brilliant of American sculptors. The figure, representing the sculptor's conception of "Water," is a companion piece to three other symbolical sculptures—"Fire," "Earth" and "Air." The four figures, typifying the elements, will flank the descents into a vast shrunken garden in the superb court of honor, the Court of the Universe. On the left may be seen the original model from which the figure was enlarged.

THE SIGNERS IN RIME.

Their Names Shall Honored Be Until the End of Time.

It will not be denied that the men who, on July 4, 1776, pledged "their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor" in behalf of our national liberty deserve the most profound reverence from every American citizen. By arranging in rime the names of the signers according to the colonies from which they were delegated the Atlanta Constitution assists the youthful learner in remembering the names of the fathers of American independence:

The Massachusetts delegation That signed our glorious Declaration Were Hancock, Gerry, Robert Paine, The great John Adams, and again Another Adams, Samuel by name. New Hampshire, called the Granite State, Sent Whipple, Bartlett, Thornton great, Alike in counsel and debate. Rhode Island's delegates, we see, Were Stephen Hopkins and Elley. Connecticut, excelled by none, With Sherman, Wolcott, Williams and Huntington.

New York as delegates employed Lewis Morris and William Floyd, With Francis Lewis and Livingston, Who died before the war was done. New Jersey to the congress sent Her honored college president, John Witherspoon, with Stockton, Clark, Hart, Hopkinson, all men of mark. Though Pennsylvania need not blush For Morris, Morton, Wilson, Rush, And, though most men might seem as dross To Clymer, Taylor, Smith and Ross, To Franklin each his tribute bring, Who neither lightning feared nor kings. The men from Delaware—indeed As true as steel in utmost need—Were Rodney with McKean and Read. "My Maryland" is proud for even Her Carroll, Fencible, Chase and Spots. On old Virginia's roll we see The gifted Richard Henry Lee, And, just as earnest to be free, His brother, Francis Lightfoot Lee, And Wythe and Nelson, patriots true, With Harrison and Braxton, too, But of them all there was not one As great as Thomas Jefferson.

North Carolina's chosen men, We know were Hooper, Hives and Penn. And South Carolina's vote was one—By Rutledge, Heyward, Lynch and Milledge. From Georgia came Gwinnett and Hall And Walton, too, the last of all Who signed our precious Declaration, The pride and glory of the nation.

LOW GRADE BUTTER.

Careless Handling of Cream Results in Loss to Dairymen.

(Prepared by the dairy division, United States department of agriculture.)

During a large part of the year the butter markets of this country have a surplus of low grade butter. Such butter is not in demand. Consequently it must be sold at low prices and thus the producers sustain large losses. It is therefore to the interest of the farmers that only good cream be produced. In order to accomplish this and to deliver the cream in good condition to the creameries three things should chiefly be kept in mind: (1) Cleanliness—that is, cleanliness must be scrupulously observed throughout all the various steps of production; (2) cooling—that is, the cream must be cooled to a low temperature as soon as it is separated, and (3) time—that is, the length of time the cream is stored on the farm must be as short as possible. If stored longer than one day the cream must be kept below 50 degrees. To do this during the summer the use of ice will be found necessary at most places.

In order to increase the production of good butter it is necessary first to increase the amount of good cream produced. By the term "good cream" is meant fresh, sweet, unadulterated cream. This kind can be produced on all dairy farms properly equipped and managed. Briefly, the most important requisites are: (1) Clean barns and yards, (2) clean and healthy cows, (3) wholesome feed, (4) clean dairy utensils, (5) clean milkers, (6) efficient cooling facilities. The dairy farmer who provides these requisites and uses them properly will find it a simple matter to produce good cream.

Call of the City.

Life in the city is needed for a real appreciation of the country. Blake, the painter and mystic dreamer, lived in the heart of London! Millet, the painter of French rural scenes, delighted in his life in Paris; Turner commenced life in Seven Dials. It is possible for people to live in the midst of earth's glories and not appreciate them till someone from the city reveals to them the charm. Of late years we have heard much of the cry: "Back to the land." It will never be much more than a cry. Men in the mass will not go back. Man's ideal is not the Garden of Eden. He has left that far behind and will never return to it.—Rev. W. H. Armstrong in the Daily Citizen.

Futurist Window Display.

An Oxford street store has turned one of its windows into a futurist boudoir, which is a regular "Midsommer Night's Dream."

There is an oxidized bed with black sheets and pillows, black and white cushions scattered about at random on sofas or on the floor, and finally, one of these very green china parrots, the reason of which is not apparent.—Washington Herald.

More Chances for Coroners.

It is predicted that a speed of 100 miles an hour will be reached by electric and steam railways. Then even more persons will be reached by cannon ball express and limited trolley car at grade crossings.

END PERSECUTION CRY OF BANKERS

Penna. Convention Opens With Attack on "Too Much Law."

THRIFT NO LONGER VIRTUE

President of Association Declares
Most Reform Legislation Is Result of Shameful Sympathy For the Unfit.

Bedford Springs, Pa., June 27.— Money with only such little breath as the reformers haven't frightened out of it, still manages to talk, and talk well.

About $200,000,000 of it, represented at the twentieth annual convention of the Pennsylvania Bankers' association at Bedford Springs, is making an eloquent appeal for a little sympathetic attention in the din of fashionable denunciation.

It says in effect that it is the beginning and the end of industry, the crown of virtuous thrift and the only mark and assurance of progress. If they don't stop kicking it around, and if there isn't a change, it will go away to foreign parts forever.

These were the intimations of its spokesmen at the opening of the convention. Montgomery Evans, president of the Norristown Trust company, and president also of the association, delivered a searing arraignment of modern legislation as his welcome to the delegates and went to lengths in his criticism of the influences behind the so-called new social idealism.

He apparently summarized the views of the bankers when he said that most of the recent reform and uplift legislation is the result of a weakling and shameful sympathy for the unfit. All political organizations, national, city and borough, Mr. Evans said, have abandoned the vital interests of the people and simultaneously have instituted unendurable systems of persecution upon the industries which assume this burden.

The banking interests of the state, he said, have twice recently been shunned by the legislature while attempting to promote laudable enterprises or essential laws. He suggested these instances to illustrate what he called the blindness of the average politician to everything except his selfish interest.

Mr. Evans was addressing about 200 men who represent virtually the total bank capitalization in Pennsylvania when by intimation he rapped the president's exemption clause favoring workmen and farmers in recent labor legislation and the whole trend of state and national legislation opposed to corporations.

The public feeling fanned by the outrages and preachment of irresponsible demagogues is such, Mr. Evans added, that, contrary to the belief that the courts favor corporations, a corporation now has little chance for even cold justice in a legal battle before judge and jury.

Reports presented at the session urged that the whole power of the organization be placed behind the movement for a renaissance of agriculture in the state.

VENEZUELAN MINISTER DIES

Dr. Rojas Succumbs to Heart Disease
In Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, June 27.—P. Ezequiel Rojas, minister from Venezuela to the United States, died here of heart disease, from which he had suffered for several years.

Dr. Rojas, who was seventy years old, was prominently identified from his youth with the politics of his country. He had been thrown into dungeons during several revolutionary periods, and for many years was compelled to live an exile from Venezuela.

For five years, from 1893 to 1898, he was minister of foreign affairs, and during his incumbency the dispute between Venezuela and Great Britain over the definition of the border between Venezuela and British Guiana was submitted to arbitration.

Dr. Rojas has been minister at Washington for the last five years, and had been minister to Argentina and Chile. At one time he was president of the national congress of Venezuela, and he also had been a representative and senator. He was born in Cumana, Venezuela, Oct. 1, 1844.

Current Kills Four Men.

Boston, June 27.—Four men were killed by electricity in a peculiar manner at the Eastern avenue plant of the Quincy Market Cold Storage company.
An elevator rope with a metal core which had become exposed by the wearing off of a fibre covering, came in contact with an electric current.
The men, grasping the rope on successive floors in an effort to stop the car after the first victim had started it, were shocked to death.

of the old group of teachers they increased the salary list by over $600 raising the salaries of seven teachers

BIG PART OF SALEM BURNED

1000 Buildings in Ruins at a Loss of Millions.

15,000 PEOPLE HOMELESS

City Is Under Martial Law and Soldiers Ordered to Shoot Looters Four Known Dead.

Salem, Mass., June 27.—The great fire which destroyed nearly one-half of this city was gotten under control after burning unchecked for fifteen hours.

The property loss will not be less than $5,000,000, insurance experts say and will probably eventually total three times as much.

Four persons are known to have perished. Several hundred are unaccounted for in the confusion, but it is not believed the loss of life is great.
Fifty persons, men for the most part,
are suffering from burns and injuries, and about 15,000 are homeless for the time being.

About a thousand buildings were destroyed by the flames. The fire originated in the Korn Leather company's factory, on the west side, and swept through the shoe and leather manufacturing district, ruining every building in a curving path two and a half miles long and more than a mile wide.

Burning embers, carried by a strong northwest wind, started fires in two other sections, the fashionable residential district adjacent to Lafayette street and a manufacturing and tenement house district on the peninsula.

Later brands kindled a fourth fire in the plant of the Salem Oil company in Mason street, northwest of the Essex county court house. A terrific explosion occurred when the oil tanks blew up and showers of sparks fell threateningly on a part of the town that before had not been in imminent danger. This fire, however, was check-ed after it had destroyed the oil company's plant and thirteen houses.

Contrary to earlier reports, all the historic and literary landmarks escaped destruction. These included the Peabody Museum, Essex Institute, Old Custom House, where Nathaniel Hawthorne did much of his literary work and "The House of the Seven Gables," made famous by the novelist.

Lack of water helped in the destruction and the city is practically without water even for drinking purposes.
Thousands of the homeless are being fed in a great army camp set up on Highland avenue. A thousand cots, a thousand tents and a thousand blankets are being distributed among the sufferers. There are rations for 10,000 being served by the militia commissary department.

Drinking water was brought in buckets from springs on the outskirts of the city or carried from Peabody Beverly, Marblehead and Lynn. So small was the supply that only a scantily filled tin cup could be allotted each applicant.

The city government met and adopted a relief plan. This provided for the establishment of three relief stations and the transfer, for sanitary reasons of the homeless ones from public halls and churches, to tents erected on the base ball park and the common. There will be a tent colony of 5000 people in the base ball park. A telegram received by Mayor Hurley from Secretary of War Garrison at Washington said that all necessary tents and the equipment would be furnished by the national government.

The greatest loss has fallen upon the factory employees, chiefly French Canadians and Poles. They comprise a majority of the homeless, and they have lost not only their homes and personal belongings, but their employment.

The city is now under martial law.
All looters will be shot on sight, it has been announced, and a cordon of soldiers extends around the burned section.

The fire started in the factory of the Korn Leather company at Proctor and Boston streets, in the center of the shoe and leather manufacturing district, in the western section of the city.

Three hundred men and women operatives were at work in this building when it was suddenly shaken by a terrific explosion. The cause of this has not been determined, but all a once flames appeared in half a dozen different spots.

Block after block was dynamited in an effort to check the fire. The rail road depot was among the buildings blown up.

How the Rain Bore Holes.

When rain falls it does not actually soak into the earth, but bores its way in, forming tiny tubes, says the Rehoboth Sunday Herald. These tubes are so small that it would be impossible to insert a hair in one of them without bursting its walls. Sometimes the tubes are bored down to a depth of four or five feet. When the surface dries the water evaporates from the tubes, just as it would from a pipe.
If the tube is twisted it takes longer
for the water to evaporate.

If one takes a rake and stirs the ground after each rain he breaks the tops of the tubes and the water will stand in them for months. In this way the farmers of the West, on semi-arid lands, store the rainfalls one year and raise a crop of wheat every other year, there being sufficient water in two years, but not enough in one to raise a crop.

GRADED BEGGARS OF MEXICO

Ten-Cent Mendicant Held Himself
Proudly Above His Brothers Who Struggled for Coppers.

In his book on Mexico, Mr. W. E.
Carson discourses amusingly on the beggars he met. On one occasion he proffered a five-cent piece to a dole-ful, but picturesque street musician.

"To my astonishment, he politely declined my humble offering."

"Senor," said he, in choice Spanish, with some emotion, "you must pardon me for being unable to accept your gift, but I am a ten-cent beggar, senor (un mendigo de diez centavos),
and never accept a smaller gratuity."

"Drawing himself up with an air of pride, he continued, 'I shall be honored to sing for your entertainment; a song of old Spain or one of our noble Mexican airs, but always for a fee of ten cents, never for less, for I am a ten-cent beggar, senor, poor as I am.'"

"It was impossible to resist this touching protest, so with an apology I handed the courtly vagrant his proper fee, which he acknowledged with 'a thousand thanks' (Mil gracias, senor) and a graceful bow. At the other end of the car the mob of beggars were scrambling for copper coins thrown to them by my fellow-passengers. The melancholy minstrel glanced at them, shrugged his shoulders and waved his hand deprecatingly.

"Ah, senor," he observed, "those poor people, they have to work hard for their bread; good folk, worthy folk, well deserving of your charity, but they give you a very bad impression of Mexico. Pray, senor, do not class them with poor musicians like myself."

No Landmarks in Space.

"There are no landmarks in space;
one portion of space is exactly like every other portion, so that we cannot tell where we are. We are, as it were,
in an unruled sea, without stars, compass, soundings, wind or tide, and we cannot tell in what direction we are going. We have no log which we cast out to take a dead reckoning by;
we may compute our rate of motion with respect to neighboring bodies, but we do not know how these bodies may be moving in space."—Max

REASON FOR SUDDEN FALL OF WHITE SOX

Ray Schalk, White Sox Catcher.

Chicago critics, in trying to discover a reason for the sudden fall of the White Sox from first place to the second division, blame the injury to Ray Schalk. This youngster is a wonderful catcher, and all the twirlers work better with him behind the bat than any of the other catchers Callahan can boast of, it is claimed. But that is hardly the cause of the slump, for Callahan's pitchers have been doing good work; but the team has played poorly, and neither hits nor fields up to a high standard.

TRANSFERRED AFFECTIONS.

"A woman may be attracted by assumed qualities, but her affections should only be fixed by those that are real," said a wise man. Another adds:
"Why were men given affections and not the power to govern them?"

It is an open question with many a single woman in her early thirties, who is alone in the world save for a married sister, as to whether she should make her home with her.
There are women who shrink from boarding among strangers and yearn for a seat at the table with their own kith and kin. The married sister is anxious that she should come. The brother-in-law does not care much one way or the other. The young lady niece frowns on the proposition, although the youthful aunt may be scarcely a few years older than herself.

If the aunt has an admirer, a man rich in the world's goods, who calls upon her constantly, the sister thinks it might hasten the marriage if there was a homelike place to invite him to.

The aunt takes the same view of
it. It often happens that a change of environment causes a man's thoughts to take a new turn.

The single woman's life and expectations may be running along smoothly until the wooer is brought in contact with the vivacious niece. There are young girls who respect such an aunt's privileges. There are some other heedless, thoughtless young women who believe that they only should hold love's scepter. The woman of mature years is sensible. Many a youthful maid is giddy, a fluffy being full of attraction. She thinks it would be a jolly joke to make eyes at auntie's rich beau.

In some instances, as a man grows older the more he yearns for all that is youthful. The attentions of a young girl, which would not have cost him a thought in his youth, flatter him in middle age. He is at that susceptible period when it is but a step for him from admiration to infatuation. The idea that he could gain the love of a young girl turns his head completely. Love swamps his honor, aye, his prudence.

SUCCESS MUST BE EARNED

Earnest, Intelligent Effort, With Industry, Will Set One Well on the Path to the Goal.

Most men who have amounted to anything started with nothing but ability and determination—a combination which recognizes no man-made limitations.

Any kind of work is better than idleness, which is directly responsible for most of the unhappiness in this world.
Idleness is a dangerous thing; it may grow into a habit that might stick to you after you get back in harness, and the man who loafs on his job is only fooling himself.

Eternal, intelligent effort is the price of commercial growth, and where there is no progression there is bound to be retrogression. Business is something like aeroplaning; to stop is to drop and to drop is generally to bust.

Pin your faith to the law of compensation, but don't take any stock in the law of chance; there's no such thing. Waiting for something to turn up in the belief that things are bound to come your way eventually is throwing dice with fate. Many a good dog never got a decent bone until his teeth were gone.

Troublesome Gender.

The trouble that Latin gender gives to American boys and girls who are struggling with the rudiments of that tongue should inspire in them a sympathetic feeling for a small descendant of the race of Attila who found the gender of our English nouns and pronouns a stumbling block.

A solid little figure trudged up to the librarian in the children's room.
"That little boy," he declared, indicating the rest of the room vaguely with his thumb, "he hit me."

The "liberty teacher" followed him back across the room until the accusing thumb halted near a table where sat a guilty-looking child about half the size of the plaintiff.

The accuser explained: "That little boy, she hit me. That little boy is a little girl; but he has short hair, and when I point at him, she hits me."

The Steamship Widow

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

The pilot had not yet left the Monarch, bound from London to Sydney, when I was fairly well posted on the passenger list. There were twenty ladies in the cabin, and half the number had their husbands along. There were thirty-five men, and all but ten were free of bondage. Of the twenty ladies three or four were single, three or four were widows and others had left husbands in England or were going to join husbands in Australia. When this list had been boiled down there was just one to fall in love with, who was down as Mrs. Ethel Warner. That means she was a widow, twenty-five years old, and rich and good looking. Before we were off soundings I had made up my mind to fall in love with Mrs. Warner.

On the third day out, which is the proper time to begin a flirtation, provided the weather is all right, I found that the other twenty-four men were of my way of thinking.

It is easy enough to bring about an introduction on shipboard. If you can't find a mutual acquaintance, then introduce yourself. When I got ready to fall in love with Mrs. Warner I walked up to her, handed her my card and a few compliments, and the thing was done. She was pleased to say that she was glad to make my acquaintance, and an hour later I was in love.

Mrs. Warner was as well bred as she was handsome. She asked no questions about five or six children. She didn't express surprise that I had lived to the age of forty without having fallen in love before. She might have shown some little doubt in her look or speech when I said that I was going out to Australia to sell out my sheep ranches and return to England with $200,000 and marry and settle down, but nothing occurred to alarm me. At the end of a couple of hours I felt that I had won her, and there could be no sort of doubt in her mind that she had looked fast. I walked about knowing that twenty-four men envied me and hated me and called me names behind my back, but not for long. That same evening a young doctor who was going out to the colony got some one to introduce him, and I saw Mrs. Warner hanging to his arm as lovingly as she had hung to mine. Later on I found the doctor in his cabin. The specious shrimp had retired to gin and chuckle and feel puffed up. I am an aggressive man. I allow nobody to interfere with my vested rights. I determined to squelch that doctor right on the spot, and when I had been admitted to his cabin I didn't lose a minute in saying:

"Sir, I desire you to understand right here and now that I am as good as engaged to Mrs. Warner, and I want no more of this lollipop business."

"If you are engaged to her she does not know it," he replied after recovering from his surprise.

"Then we had a scrap, in which blood was drawn and clothing torn, and it was understood that as soon as we landed in Australia there should be a shooting match. On the next day the widow was mine for a couple of hours. While I talked love more or less, I felt it my duty to warn her against the other twenty-four men in the most solemn manner. The lady thanked me over and over again for my more than brotherly interest, and when I at last handed her to a sent and went off for a smoke I was ready to ask her to name the day.

After tidin that evening, when I had gone to my cabin to change coats, the door was suddenly banged open, and a fellow named Richards entered. I had learned that he was a needy lawyer, going out to the colony in hopes to better his purse.

"Sir, I want a few plain words with you," began the miserable wretch as I confronted him. "I am as good as engaged to Mrs. Warner, and if you will only bear that in mind hereafter it may save you trouble."

We came together. We clawed, kicked, bit and pulled hair, and we were both badly damaged when we got through.

As soon as I could properly appear on deck I decided to settle matters one way or the other. I was waiting for the widow to appear when I was invited to the smoking room to debate a matter of business. I found the other twenty-four men there. When the meeting had been called to order a callow youth arose and inquired if it was understood that the whole twenty-five of us were in love with some woman. It was so understood. He then stated that he felt himself engaged to that woman and wanted to know if the rest of us did. We felt so. Then the callow youth asked if any one had a suggestion to offer. Twenty-four suggestions were offered in chorus, but the callow youth turned them all down for one of his own.

Then everybody drew in his breath and turned on his neighbor, but before a blow had been struck the purser and a lady stepped inside. It was Mrs. Warner. She nodded and smiled to each man of the twenty-four, and then the purser cleared his throat and said: "Gentlemen, permit me to introduce my wife. If her little escapade has been the cause—"

But we all rose up and bowed and laughed and shook hands all around, and during the rest of the voyage peace and harmony prevailed to such an extent that the run was voted a bore.

MY story will be closed all day,

July 4. W. C. Yeatts, Bendersville.—advertisement

POULTRY NOTES.

At the approach of a storm see that the chicks are tightly shut up in their coops till all danger is over.

It is now well known that sour skimmilk is the best preventive of bowel trouble that has been found for young chickens, turkeys and all poultry.

Sloppy or mushy feed should not be given to chicks, young or old. Their digestive system is so constructed as to fit them especially to live on solid feed, like the grains.

Clean out the poultry houses, coops and nests and thoroughly disinfect them. Keep them clean and let the only odor about them be one suggestive of cleanliness.

A cock two years old is better than a younger one.

MONEY IN POULTRY FOR THE FARMER

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

The farm is the ideal place for chickens, and the foundation upon which all successful poultry operations rest is constitutional vigor. Without a high degree of health it is utterly impossible to progress in poultry work. Such being the case, nowhere are conditions so conducive to poultry success as they are on the farm.

Generally the farmer has some old building that can be fixed up with very little expense and will make a good poultry house. He is not compelled by a limited amount of space to put his poultry house or houses on a certain spot, but can select a nice, high, dry location for this purpose, with the building facing the south. These two advantages mean a good deal to the average poultryman.

In addition, the farmer has the advantage in that his birds can have free range, thereby securing bugs, insects, green feed and grit in abundance, the equivalent of which, if it had to be purchased, would amount to considerable in the course of a year. In most instances he can put a wire fence around the garden instead of yarding the fowls, giving him the opportunity of producing birds of strong constitution, eggs from such stock being high

When the chicks hatch protect them from wet and filthy ground to save them from gapes and intestinal troubles. After thirty hours' fast start chicks on dry, sweet bread, then chick feed, later larger cracked and whole grain, and remember you are building, not fattening, the fowls. Thus much protein is needed. Alfalfa and white clover make chicks grow all white. The brood here pictured is living nature's way.

in fertility and producing good, strong chicks. The importance of a strong constitution cannot be emphasized too much.

The farmer should keep standard bred fowls only to begin with, the initial cost of a sitting of eggs from standard bred fowls or a pen of such birds today being very little higher than the cost of scrub stock. They are more beautiful than the common run of fowls, and there is no question that a person takes more interest in caring for such stock than for mixed breeds. Then, again, the opportunity for selling eggs for hatching and stock from such fowls are many times increased over those to be had with the common stock. Such stock as we have mentioned often produces prize winning specimens that sell for comparatively large sums.

It is no unusual thing today for the farmer-poultryman who is specializing in standard bred poultry to secure from $1.50 to $5 per sitting for eggs and from $2 to $5 per single specimens from his flock. If one is fortunate enough to have a flock which produces a fair per cent of fine birds the income to be derived from such goes a long way toward buying the clothes, groceries and many luxuries for the family and home. Standard bred fowls produce uniform products, which, if properly marketed, bring much higher returns than those from the mixed flock. For instance, the selected, clean, large, white egg and the selected, clean, large, brown egg will bring a higher return on most markets than the mixed brown and white egg. The same is true of the uniformity in shape of the dressed standard bred as against the mixed breed fowl. Dressed poultry of the same size, weight and color brings more on most markets than dressed poultry uneven in size and mixed in color.
